Florida Hospital Internal Medicine Residency will be an integral part of me for the rest of my life. Coming to the United States from India, this wonderful program accepted me like a family member and there was no looking back. Not often are you lucky enough to be taught and mentored by a leader like Dr. Everett. The faculty at the program is wonderful and form a strong backbone. It is here that I found friendships that last a lifetime. It is here that I received the training that I am confident has not only helped me become a strong physician but also a better human being.

With this solid foundation, I was chosen to pursue a Nephrology Fellowship at Yale.

Our Residency program is built on solid principles and the people are its soul. I have been truly blessed to be part of this program in multiple capacities and will cherish the memories forever.

I am proud to be a part of the Florida Hospital Family. I feel lucky that I got an opportunity to train here. The Internal Medicine Faculty is excellent and one definitely gets an outstanding exposure to the most advanced skills and techniques in all specialties of medicine. This experience not only helped me advance my knowledge but also mold my personality. I feel more confident in handling all aspects of patient care even during my fellowship training which I am currently pursuing in the field of Endocrinology at Tufts Medical Center. I wouldn't shy away from saying the Florida Hospital helped me achieve my dream. If given an opportunity again to work here, my alma mater will always be my top choice.

I had a unique experience at Florida Hospital in that I was born there and knew many employees from my childhood, and so in sense, it was 'home'. However, it was the training that I received during my time in the Internal Medicine Residency Program that paved the way for where I am at today. I had attendings who were supportive and encouraged learning in a manner that made you think and feel comfortable enough to be wrong. Their bedside and case-based teaching allowed me to be a better learner and impressed in me the type of teacher that I strive to be today. The vast pathology and the size of the hospital gave me a great base to pursue my specialty of Infectious Disease and prepared me for a rigorous fellowship program. I am grateful to the faculty and staff at Florida Hospital Internal Medicine Residency who have played a large role in my achievements.

I look back on residency with fond memories. The friendships, experiences and mentorship have helped me achieve my goals. I started residency with an open mind, undecided whether I would pursue sub-specialty training. The first year of residency was an exhilarating experience, each day brought new adventures and knowledge. I enjoyed all my rotations; however, my infectious disease rotation was the most memorable. Florida Hospital, being a regional transplant hub, also introduced me to the immunocompromised host and realized my interest in this unique patient population.

In addition to a great clinical experience, I found excellent mentorship. I was able to work closely with our ID faculty and become involved in clinical research and quality improvement. This piqued my interest in a career in academic medicine, which was confirmed by an outside elective at the ID division at UCSF.

I decided to pursue the next stage of my training at an academic institution that would provide a balance of clinical education and clinical research, along with the camaraderie I had at Florida Hospital. I found this at Mayo Clinic, where I am not on the Intensive Care-Stewardship track, focusing my academic activities and clinical experiences in these areas.

I feel fortunate to have spent 3 years at Florida Hospital for my Internal Medicine residency, and would definitely choose it all over again if I had to!

I am a graduate from the Florida Hospital Internal Medicine Program. I feel fortunate I chose this program for my training. I highly encourage everybody who is sincere about medicine to consider this program. You will receive superb training in a very supportive environment. You will be prepared to practice medicine in any possible setting. This program has produced several excellent primary care doctors and hospitalists, and may succeed with sub-specialty training. Our residents were able to secure fellowships in almost all specialties. I personally work as a hospitalist as well as in a community clinic setting. I am glad for the things

I have learned during my residency on a daily basis.
